Over three-quarters of the students who attended the Fields School, some of them for eight years, completed a bachelor s degree. Of these, over half had completed some graduate work, including nearly a third had master s degrees, one a law degree and one an earned doctorate. The researcher s concluding statement: The overwhelming success of the Fields School, despite the limitations of the physical setting, furnishings, and available materials and books represents a triumph of this unusual family over difficult circumstances. The story of the school while interesting and informative is really the story of the Fields family since the school was an extension of the family s commitment to its children. The story of the family is yet to be written.
